Details: Conga El©ctrica is a diverse album with five new songs and five songs chosen from Cubas rich musical history. Its textures range from that of an intimate trio playing a sambafied bolero (Aorado Encuentro) to a transient take on Cuban carnival music with guitar hero Octavio Kotans pulsating riffs and Brazilian-style call and response drum breaks (the title track). The key innovation on this album is the integration, on four tracks, of Bloco Quimbomb, a Brazilian-style bateria or drum section. What the bateria does here is to add a dense layer of street drumming to the Cuban groovebeats tailor-made for each song by musical director and producer Nick Herman. The album features the powerful callejero (streetwise) voice of Grammy-nominated Havana native David Oquendo, full of spontaneity and humor. Oquendo was likewise deeply involved in the bands debut release, Quimbomb. Making his debut recording here as a lead singer is Igor Arias Bar, a young Cuban well known in New York for his energetic improvising in the hard hitting timba style. REVIEWS: "Its hard not to hope the electric experiment keeps on going. Highly Recommended." --Peter Watrous, (former NY Times Critic), writing for Descarga Review "This new set from this hard charging New York based/world oriented crew will blow your ears wide open. A savory gumbo that keep the caliente muy... " --Midwest Record "...rambunctious...Within the musical context of Quimbomb, we've grown accustomed to authenticity. In a very modern setting, that's what we got. " --Nestor Louis, Palosalsero Album Cover Art: Maracatu da Zona da Mata by Marcio Melo
