Dave has been involved in music since he was a young child singing duets with his brother and learning piano. After leaving school he played guitar with cover bands for a while, but his main instrument was the trombone. Dave played with several orchestras, bands and brass groups until 1995 when he took a break from music. In 1999 the wish to play music again took hold of Dave and he picked up the guitar again and in 2000 he found the power of digital audio workstations. From then he began to write his own music and put together his studio, gradually developing his skill own musical style. "Call Me" is the culmination of that work.
