ELECTRONIC: Experimental, JAZZ: Weird Jazz People who are interested in Miles Davis Sun Ra The Bays should consider this download. Details: Loop Ellington was born underground, while sat on a tube train, listening to Duke Ellington mp3s. His big band were dropping sleazy brass riffs inducing life from the old chugging train. The screeching breaks and hissing doors defined a moment. A cultural memory resonated from the trans-continental express trains that Ellingtons band rode, to the cut up electronic laptop sound of todays musical innovators. Loop Ellington are based around 2 laptops, trumpet and a table full of electronics to produce an evolving pattern of sound and loops, always re-inventing itself. They are inspired by the Dukes ability to mess with the head as well as the feet, having crossed through experimental jazz clubs to the dance floor. Loop Ellington write pieces that evolve from mashing up old Duke Ellington recordings with beats and electronics and adding the live electric trumpet of Andy Diagram. The two tracks featured on the single are evolved from "Caravan" and "Black and Tan Fantasy". Not that you would recognise those tunes from the single as none of the Duke bits are used or even quoted here. This is the first of a series of limited edition 7inch singles that establish mutated duke free versions. The plan is to reveal on a forthcoming album, how the original Ellington tunes were bent out of shape and turned into our own compositions.
