Details: Ekendra dasa is not your typical singer/songwriter/bhakti-yoga teacher. Ekendra seems to be perpetually frustrated no matter where he goes. He writes songs about his frustration. Early in life, his intense frustration with the status quo led him on a journey to find ultimate meaning. This isnt easy in America. His initial travels led him to New York City, San Francisco, then Chicago.

Disappointingly, the closest thing he found to absolute conviction was the worship of Giants, 'Niners and Bears. Then, a surprising twist of fate led Ekendra on a life-altering research project--into the inspirational teachings of the Bhagavad-gita, of all things. The Gita, as far as Ekendra is concerned, is as close to a perfect guidebook as can be for understanding life, the universe, and everything. Way, way better, even, than the Hitchhikers Guide to the Galaxy. Early on in his research project, he happened to join a like-minded group of musicians and traveling brahmacari monks, who called themselves Shelter. He helped with the drumming, driving, and cooking for a few years, but even now hes still recovering from the touring schedule and outrageous decibel levels at their shows. His first solo CD, God Project, by Ekendra dasa and the Planet Cow Orchestra, was voted one of the top Do It Yourself albums of 1999 by Performing songwriter magazine, and sold well into the hundreds. His second album, 200 Proof Absolute Truth, was heard, in part, on National Public Radios automotive repair call-in comedy show, Car Talk. His new CD, Car toons, is a collection of songs about how difficult it is to be a spiritual seeker while living in the United States of America, and contains many references to the operation of certain types of motor vehicles. He now lives near Gainesville, Florida--home to thousands of pure devotees of the University of Florida Gators. For more information, go to ekendradasa.com.
