Its the song where the album titel comes from: Surrender to win. The Birds to the kidnapping and killing of hundreds of innocent school children in Beslan (2004). A protest song against violence against children, war and terrorism. Growing pains is a flashback to the younger days of a kid struggling with family live and a confusing mix of love and fear. The fields of love? A love song without a happy ending. Johnny dont go is a swinging, up tempo version of a song originally written by the well known Irish songwriter John Spillane. The next song on the track list is written by Wally Page, songwriter for a.o. Christy Moore and a good friend of John and Ed. A song about Chico Mendes, a Brazilian rubber tapper, unionist and environmental activist. He founded a national union of rubber

Listen to the almost classical arrangement of John ODreams with Ed Veltrop on piano and Siard de Jong on fiddle. The band For eleven years now John ODreams is doing live concerts in the Netherlands, Belgium and Germany. In 2007 the duo did a tour in China with impressive gigs in Beijing and Shanghai. They also did thirteen (!) live tours in Ireland. The duo is inspired by a lot of Irish contemporary singer/songwriters: Christy Moore, Luka Bloom, Wally Page, Shane McGowan, ... John and Ed are well known musical guests now in folk clubs, theatres and at major festivals. Johns biggest source of inspiration is Irelands number one singer/songwriter Christy Moore. John sings with a typical Kildare accent and after each gig the audience and especially the Irish stay behind flabbergasted: this Dutchman must have some Irish roots. The reviews The Dutch folkmagazine NewFolkSounds is convinced after listening to their first CD album: John Flierman is the Christy Moore of the Netherlands. Christy Moore himself picked up the phone more than once to give this duo his support. Stage animal Ed Veltrop sings, plays Hammond, piano and accordion and knows like no one else how to win the audiences attention. Hes also the main man behind the musical arrangements on Surrender to win. NewFolkSounds: Veltrop delivers a few sublime piano, Hammond and accordion accompaniments and solos, which make it all even more dynamic. Besides his membership of John ODreams, Ed is also co-operating with Irish singer/songwriters such as Wally Page, Daithi Rua, Danny Guinan and Roesy. Reviews on the former album Second stage: Irish Music Magazine, Sean Laffey: They are worth every guilder of the entrance fee! Irish Bands Live UK John O'Dreams has built a reputation as one of the top Irish duos. John sings Irish ballads with a Kildare accent and it would take a good man to say he was not of Irish blood. I can honestly say I was not disappointed when I slipped the disk into the player and out came this amazing blend on instruments combining to make superb Irish Music. Both are excellent musicians. These guys do it with style and add their own exciting sound. John has the great gift of being able to sing Irish ballads in the way they were meant to be sung, with passion and pride and a voice that would be envied by many an Irish man. Add to this the outstanding musical skills of Ed Veltrop whose backing vocals are outstanding to say the least and you have an album of great beauty. Info bookings: +
