A blend of traditional and original Christmas tunes mixed with the humour and emotion audiences have come to love about a McKrells performance. 9 MP3 Songs FOLK: Traditional Folk, WORLD: Celtic

Details: The McKrells did so many things in their Christmas concert Sunday afternoon at Hart Theatre that anyone who didn't vividly recall their own Christmas traditions under the inspiration of the band's songs and recitations, carols, hymns and bluegrass breakdowns didn't have any such traditions when they came in. But they certainly did when they left. The McKrells' skill and sincerity kept corniness firmly at bay. The show built such peaks of real sentiment that among the flurries of holiday season shows, it will be hard to top. The Daily Gazette "This group is a collaboration of red hot pickers who all happen to love Celtic Music. It's deep in their genes and comes out in a unique mix of Irish Bluegrass experimental music that is catching on like crazy" Winterhawk Bluegrass Festival program. With The Fureys at Carnegie Hall New York. "The McKrells Carnegie Hall performance was golden and triumphant, every solo met with applause and every song punctuated with a roar" Paul Rapp Metroland Magazine. With Mary Black "With their unearthly combination of emotive vocals and fiery picking, The McKrells seem poised to fill the huge void left by the demise of New Grass Revival. The only thing between the McKrells and world domination is time." Dave Malachowski. Metroland Magazine. With Lonestar If bands were paid by the number of notes they played, soulfulness, conviction, confidence or black leather the McKrells would have bagged most of the money Thursday. Kevin McKrell owned the stage and crowd as usual and sang "It's Not Me" as the country-est song of the night. His new "I Will Cry" about watching the news following 9/11 (Milonovich quoting "America the Beautiful" in the coda) won a standing ovation. So did their set as a whole. They were a delicious bonus and surprise. The Daily Gazette With Altan "Mairead Ni Mhaonaigh, of Altan, hailed The McKrells performance as brilliant, and added "we were a little afraid to come out here on stage after their performance." Greg Haymes Times Union. With Solas "Solas and The McKrells put on a stirring show. Kevin McKrell sang with a madman's fervor and a lover's tenderness. They would have stolen the show from anyone but Solas." Mike Hochenadel The Daily Gazette "It's positively exhilarating to be swept away by a regional band's CD. The songwriting talent in this band is mind boggling. Why aren't The McKrells better known and why aren't they with a major recording label???" Bluegrass Now Magazine.
