

Politics And Trade Cooperation In The Nineteenth Century

DOWNLOAD HERE

This book examines international trade cooperation during the first great period of globalization in the nineteenth century. This book examines international trade cooperation in 1815-1914. Basing the theoretical analysis on the domestic political economy of states, Pahre develops theories of international cooperation, the spread of trade cooperation, and the effect of trade regimes. The book examines trade politics in the entire century from 1815 to 1914 around the world, using a new database of trade agreements. It will appeal to students of international relations, comparative political economy, economic history, trade law, and international organizations.
