instrumental heavy mood music featuring guitar sax flute 5 MP3 Songs ROCK: Instrumental Rock, ELECTRONIC: Soundscapes Details: Flipside Magazine printed 2 reviews of "The Sadness Of Winter" in the April/May 1995 issue. Flipside review #1 FRANK RAVEN "The Sadness Of Winter" CD Sometimes bordering on Pink Floyd core. Sometimes environmental ambient, sometimes sleepy time music. Five long songs on this CD are ready to lift you out of your lotus position with their keyboards and wind instruments. Mellow out and relax! Good background for teatime. Very well recorded and produced. -AArtVark Flipside review #2 FRANK RAVEN "The Sadness Of Winter" CD Neat-o boss cherry depressive meandering art jazz for putting your life to the GOOD NEWS (razor, that is...). They should put on hold when you call the suicide hotline and play this over the phone, so maybe we could thin out the crybaby weakling population. (Hey I used to want to snuff my life out too, now I just want to snuff out everybody else's!) Or better yet, play this in all those highrise corporate office buildings, maybe I could scratch myself up a free suit for when I want to convince all those fame seeking out of town bimbos, that clog L.A., that I'm a rich casting agent. It's not that I'm insensitive, it's just that I don't give a fuck about you. Actually, I find this CD kind of interesting, unlike the fact that you are still living. -Pookie Illinois Entertainer review 9/95 Whether "Hello Frank" the first track on this disc, refers to Frank Raven (the musician who wrote performed it) or to Frank Zappa (the man who clearly was an influence) is probably open to discussion, but one cannot argue that this five song set titled The Sadness Of Winter, is a stellar effort. Each tune is a noise collage, combining bits of saxophone, flute, keyboards, Tibetan bells, and voice samples into an enticing sonic blend. The aggressively jazzy sound is unusual and certainly untraditional, and the artist pushes the boundaries just enough to make this collection pleasing and worthwhile. -JB
