Drama lives in this full production rock record. 12 MP3 Songs POP: Today's Top 40, ROCK: Modern Rock Details: Nicole Paradiso's debut album The Fall was produced by Nicole Paradiso and Nic Hard with a little coffee and a lot of gas. Recorded first at Z-Studio in Brooklyn, July 2004, the rhythm tracks were finished with cigarettes, heat, and rain. Nir Z on drums and Andy Hess on Bass. NirZis a place to check out his discography, like playing on John Mayer's Room for Squares. Andy Hess' resume is huge including gigs like touring with The Black Crows. These guys are serious players. So, after Brooklyn, it was out to a studio in Western NJ called Charlestown Road Studio. A big piano. Animals. A pool. August. Nic Hard is a star engineer and co-producer. Supportive and crazy. You can look for some of his latest work with the band The Bravery. Notice, the string sounds are all live thanks to Julia Kent on cello and Claudia Chopek on violin. The cricket sounds are live too. After that tracking, there was mixing in September at Bushwick Studio in Brooklyn. Then mastering with Scott Hull at The Hit Factory in NYC. Scott Hull is another amazing technician. A real person, with a great ear and the skill to apply it. His discography is enormous. Just google him to find out. Photography was done by this rad couple from the East Village who call themselves Crackerfarm. The graphics and layout for the cd itself and the website were done by JJ Larson of Kvell Creative. Pressed and packaged through A to Z Music. That's the story of how the record was made. All songs written by Nicole Paradiso. Listen to it and find out what she has to say.
