Born in 1986, the year after Roger Douglas floated the dollar and sailed New Zealand into the free market, Tono grew up at a time when New Zealanders were trading in their tattered old social consciences for the sexy promises of neo-liberal economics. Too impatient to make it as an historian, and seeing there was no market for protest songs, Tono decided to embrace the world around him, and write pop songs about relationships in a free market world. Tono's debut EP, Love and Economics, is a witty, playful take on a deadly serious subject the effect of the invisible hand on the heart. With insightful, character-based lyrics, twisting key changes and tightly crafted song structures, all wrapped up in efficient, beatle-esque pop arrangements, this five-song experience will have you running to Wikipedia to look up opportunity cost. Love Economics hits stores on June the 2nd. Tono and his Finance Company (Matt Bodman, Chris Miller, Andy Straight) recorded the EP in Dunedin with Stu Harwood of The Tweeks. It was mastered by local wizard, Dale Cotton, and now Jody Lloyds Shell Be Right Records is proudly releasing it. * Brilliant Vicki Anderson, Christchurch Press. * An exercise in attention to detail where clever songcraft benefits from the ensembles dynamic but nicely restrained delivery Shayne Gilchrist, Otago Daily Times. * 'An updated Dunedin sound of the 80s, for the intellectual with a dry sense of humour and a slightly tinny ear' - Sharyn Croft, Groove Guide. 'It's bloody good.' Grant Smithies, Sunday Star Times.
