A romantic novel between a gifted genetics professor and his exceptional student that covers in depth the subjects of faith and science, a revolutionary breakthrough in the curing of disease and the medical, political, social and religious consequences of using it. Miles Hugo, one of the most brilliant men ever known, is a unique phenomenon in the world of genetics research. When he accomplishes what seems to be the impossible, as a promise to his deceased mother, he runs into an insurmountable obstacle, the extraordinary love and incomparable faith of one of his students. Jenny Browning has captured his heart and troubled his genius mind. She in turn must reconcile her love for her professor with her love for God or risk losing both. Receiving conflicting advice from Hugo's mentor, J.T. O'Rourke, and her best friend, Abbie Duncan, Jenny finds herself confronting evil at its very core. When the threat is revealed of what tomorrow may bring, and a life she loves hangs in the balance, Jenny decides to do the unthinkable.
