Built around piano and vocals, this album has elements of pop and jazz incorporated into emotionally driven songs. 12 MP3 Songs POP: Piano, POP: Delicate Details: Toronto based singer/songwriter Wendy Leung brings her music to CD Baby for the first time with her sophomore album This Time. Having been classically trained on the piano since the age of four, music has always played a major role in Wendy's life. "I remember writing lyrics to a song I played at a music festival at the age of five or six and showing it to the adjudicator, hoping for some feedback." While a far cry from true songwriting, a seed had already been planted in her head. Through her teenaged years, Wendy dabbled in lyric-writing, but stuck mostly to singing favourite pop songs at the top of her lungs. An early favourite was Mariah Carey, whose music taught her to "exercise [her] vocal range." As her musical tastes matured somewhat, she began listening to Canadian singer/songwriters like Sarah McLachlan, Chantal Kreviazuk and Emm Gryner, as well as bands like Our Lady Peace. Recognizing songwriting as a skill she wanted to develop, Wendy began to write songs in 1998. Wendy's first album, A Place to Start, was a compilation of songs written between then and 2000, and introduced audiences to what has become the foundation of her songs - a blend of piano, vocals, and raw emotion. Her sophomore release, This Time, matures in its diversity, introducing guitar, bass and drums to enhance the sound and complement the lyrical content. This album includes the foot-tapping pop song You, the aptly titled Jazz, the melancholic ballad Truth, and the harmonically dense Silently (The Game). Wendy is currently writing songs for a third album, drawing from a wider source of musical influences and life experiences, and continuing to perform in the Toronto area. Look for her at the Indigo Bookstore at Bay/Bloor sometime soon.
