When you contacted me about it last night, I was actually working on a sales letter for a product I have coming out soon. Talk about perfect timing! I really liked the format of the sales page that was generated. It has a very crisp, professional feel to it. It also helped me figure out what was missing from my sales letter. Filling out the form, I was could easily see which parts of the sales letter were missing and fill in all the gaps. ezinemarketingreport Date: August 27th From: Russell Brunson A professionally written sales letter can quickly generate thousands of dollars in sales. On the other hand, if your sales letter stinks like a wet dog you can lose thousands of dollars in potential sales regardless of how good your product is. After creating my first website it struggled to make even 1 sale a week. I received hundreds of visitors to my site each day, but made very few sales. I decided to crawl out on a ledge financially and hire a copywriter. What happened next shocked me... My conversion rates skyrocketed. Sales didn't just double they flowed like an incoming ocean tide. I was generating sales daily instead of weekly. I learned the value of a professionally written sales page overnight with solid proof in my now bulging bank account. Professional copywriters have mastered the art of getting website visitors to take their wallets out of their pockets and make the purchase. They use the hypnotic power of certain words to increase the perceived value of your product, causing people to take action. This converts them from passive website visitors to hungry customers who cannot sleep until they have what you are offering! "So, why not just hire a copywriter for all your websites?" Good question... Do you have tens of thousands of dollars laying around to hire a copywriter to write a sales letter for every product and website you build? Copywriters are very expensive. You're going to pay a copywriter more money then you would pay a doctor or a lawyer! Makes you want to become a copywriter huh? Some charge up to $25,000 for one sales letter! Making money online really comes down to two cold hard facts: 1. You will have to hire a copywriter, or... 2. You will have to spend years learning how to write effective ad copy. I don't know about you, but time and money are two assets that I like to hang on to! I am a real penny pincher but without a powerful sales letters I would have no pennies to pinch.
