Combining elements of alt-folk, jazz and popular music, with some honest, upfront songwriting, this subtly haunting and beautiful album cannot be forgotten. 10 MP3 Songs FOLK: Jazzy folk, FOLK: Alternative Folk Details: Some reviews for Cathryn's music: I have been in the music industry (publishing, performing, promoting managing artists) for many years...Cathryn is going places. She not only writes fine songs, but has a voice to deliver them in a style that isnt just a clone of something(body) you heard before, but one that has a depth and an edge that is so often missing. Theres something a bit special there...I heard it the first time I saw her." Gerry Mansfield Maverick Magazine Fantastic Stuff BBC Southern Counties Radio "Cloaked in the Joogleberry's distinctive cityscape, exiled west country troubadour Cathryn Stone enticed the audience with her harmonic musings on the nature of home and place, marking a set of rounded acoustica with an itinerant touch. Stone's folkish roots were unfettered through the understated percussive talents of drummer Dil, and the bow and slide fretwork of Tom on double bass. These two, combined with the frequently tangential nature of Stone's songwriting, lent the whole gig a jazzy undercurrent, something which came to the fore during the final track "Bounce". When they clicked, the trio's syncopation was impressive, though the most immediate song of the evening, the emotive "Still Moving" owed more to Cathryn's effortless vocal clarity and pursuit of melody. Numbers such as this made it quite apparent that Stone possesses a voice of such rare quality that she has a comfortable head start in the congested race for music industry recognition. One to watch." Nick Mee LATEST 7 Cathryns confidence built a rapport with the audience straight away, her unique voice telling stories of restless traveling. The atmosphere was great, the venue packed to the rafters, and far too small for the fab talent oozing out of these two acts. Allison Pereira Reviewing for Brighton Festival Fringe - 5 star award.
