Details: With a voice like fine sandpaper, Vocalist/songwriter/performer Uriah polishes lyrics and smooths melodies into modern grooves, revealing the exquisite, hand-rubbed grain within. Classic soul is a touchstone in the sound, but it is neither new nor neo. "It's just soul," says Uriah. "It doesn't matter whether it's old or new, either you've got it or you don't." Uriah clearly has it: in the authenticity of his voice, the power of his songwriting, and the welcome warmth of his artistry. Music was such a vital necessity in his life. Uriah grew up on blues and gospel, courtesy of his parents, but his sister's collection of Parliament/Funkadelic records was also a vital source of inspiration. After attending the University of Kansas for a brief time on a music scholarship, Uriah moved to Los Angeles with the proverbial stars in his eyes. For a small town boy, Uriah, whose name means "God's light, Los Angeles afforded not only a real-life education but the freedom to unlock the voice within. Working with a vocal coach, Uriah built his voice up to a mighty crescendo while he concentrated on writing songs. Now, with an intuitive confidence, a renewed focus, and his powerhouse vocals, he is emerging into a new era of his artistry.
