Details: Can You See is a compilation of songs written over the last 5 years or so and performed at backyard parties and living rooms in a town near me. To make a long story short, after many requests for a recorded copy of these songs and a great love for music, I finally recorded my first cd. In my friend's loft over the barn, Randy Hedgepeth (a gigging drummer with a Temecula, CA cover band named Reseeded) and myself put together a studio so we could help local musicians record gig demos and record my music. Using an acoustic guitar, a keyboard base, violin and drums Can You See came to reality. With the help of blues harmonica player "The Beef" on the song Freedom and Randy with his discriminating ear and feedback, I am very proud to bring you these songs. As a writer at heart and a classically trained violinist, the door is now open to enjoy the hobby I love. Music! Can You See marks the first of many productions I hope to do during my lifetime. My biggest hope is that somebody out there connects with the sounds and feelings that are mine. Here is a short description of the 9 songs on this album: Love Grows The maturing of a relationship from infatuation to admiration and trust. Do You Know The course of life and where it takes you using faith alone as none of us for sure know all the facts and also about miscommunication. Can You See A statement about complacency and the feelings that we have no responsibility for the circumstances around us. Sex Can Do About desperation and self-sacrifice to survive. Addiction This is the drug or drink talking back at its prey and the insidious power of denial. Black Window Out of all the animals on the planet earth, mankind seems to be the only one that frets over what they do not know. Puppy Eyes Words were written by my son at the age of 12 and is about abandonment and feeling alone. The Way It Feels About miscommunication in relationships and the frail nature thereof.

Freedom The cost of freedom being the loss of freedom and a hope for an awakening.
