Her mother, born in Iran, was forbidden to express herself musically due to the rigid religious influences of the country, so she encouraged Laleh's musical expression. Laleh performed all over the East Coast while completing a degree in Industrial Engineering and Music! Her love for singing and performing for an audience grew so immense that she knew what her goal in life would be. After her four years at Virginia Tech were complete, she hitched a ride to New York. Upon her arrival, Laleh received a dance scholarship at Broadway Dance Center and began her career in the Entertainment Industry. Soon thereafter, Laleh received national attention as the choreographer, instructor, and co-host of the "MTV Grind Hip-Hop/ Workout Video" in which she co-starred with Eric Neis.
