Beatles mixed with 80s/90s rock with a dash of Progressive Art Rock 11 MP3 Songs ROCK: Progressive Rock, POP: British Pop Details: The original Rock Pop, Grey's sophomore studio effort, was recorded in 2001-2002 at Champagne Studios. The entire process was filmed as an award-winning "Let it be-esque" television documentary series, "Grey: The Rock Pop Sessions." The track "This is the Time, This is the Place" reached #4 on the Psychedelic charts at mp3.com, and the music videos for it, "Enough for me Tonight" and "Addiction" took home Best Music Video at the Bare Bones International Film Festival. During this time, Grey was featured as Artist of the Week at radio station KUAL, and interviewed to promote the album. But with the subsequent death of mp3.com, Grey saw this as an opportunity to re-record the album in 2004 at his Grey Havens Studios in a more leisurely fashion not provided to him with the original recordings. These recordings also feature the talents of Jason Harbour, Mike Harbour, Kevin Bunch, and Stephen Harwood. The album is an equal blend of rock and pop styles that are an enjoyable listen all the way through.
