Details: With some renewed confidence and some familiar band mates behind him, Jeff went back into the studio (Lou Whitney's Column One Studios in Springfield) to record Where It Goes, in the fall of 1990. Joplin's Steve Ritter (The Acrylics, A Picture Made The Connells) and Jacque Garoutte played drums and bass, respectively. The ten-song collection, also released on cassette, was the first to garner regional press that touted him as the next roots rocker to be reckoned with. He hit the regional road (AR, KS, OK, and MO) to promote "Where," with Greg Krutsinger (lead singer of Joplin's Missionaries later of Georgia Overdrive), Jacque Garoutte (also of The Missionaries later a member of Joplin's Websters), and Ryan Butler filling the drum, bass, and rhythm guitar duties. The Jeff Graham Band got to do its share of opening for the occasional headliner (John Kilzer, The Subdudes, The Connells, and The Rembrandts, to name a few).
