His pensive piano recordings provide the perfect soundtrack to life's simpler moments. "When I was five, I started taking piano lessons because my older brother was taking piano lessons, and anything Andy did, I had to do, only better," says the man who grew-up Gary Bass in the small town of Shelbyville, Indiana. "My early aspirations were to become either Barry Manilow, Billy Joel, or Elton John (the piano triumvirate)," relates Bass. He adds, "In high school I played three years for our show choir and started writing songs. That's where I got The Bug. After college I moved to Austin, Texas, and the rest, as they say, is hysterical." As an A-list professional pianist in the "Live Music Capital Of The World," this Central Texas piano man can be found playing the standards of yesterday and today at countless wedding receptions and many fine restaurants. In 2002, Bass realized a life-long dream and released his very first CD, an album of ten original piano solos called Quiet Steps. He adds, "It's amazing to warm people with my music. It makes such a difference in my world to make a difference in the world of others."
