At the age of 16, several bands were comprised dealing with 3-piece alternative rock music, though he felt a lack of substance and creativity within that genre of music. After highschool, his roommate introduced him to computers, which he became quickly acquainted with. That same year he met fellow programmer musician Jung Bo Seul, a Korean refugee who showed him phrenetic break beats in a whole new light, and the first Eclectic Electric album was born, titled 'Percuscission'. In 1999, he started to devise his own machines to create his own experimental sound to use as rhythmic and percussive arrangements. In 2000, he created his own label, Eclectic Electric, and released his first album titled 'Approach'. Later that same year his EP titled 'Audio Left and Right' was released. Then, in 2001, he released his second album titled 'Lestari'. In 2002, the next album entitled 'Inducing Intelligence' was released. Currently in the year 2003, dadAqraph combined his activities with a local production company named Laughing Shadow Productons to create a DVD music video for the track 'grust' on his latest album titled 'Balance LP'.
