Doug and Telisha Williams embody the true Southern songwriting tradition that so many others try to imitate. They approach their music with contagious energy, inviting, open personalities, and honest grit. First timers at their live shows feel like old friends and part of the family after just a song or two. With countless touring miles and one record under their belt, the duo has just finished work on a second release with a stellar group of musicians including Darrell Scott, Dennis Crouch, Kenny Malone and Eamon McLoughlin. With Miles Wilkinson producing, this project promises to really be something great. The target date for setting this one free is early 2006. Im excited about this record, its very honest, almost raw, says Doug, Some of these songs come from pretty shadowy places. Of course, it isnt all dark and depressing, There are a couple of happy songs! Even a love song, and its honest, too! notes Telisha. Telisha and Doug, now married and living in Southwest Virginia, have been playing music together since both of them were in high school. Now fourteen years later they have emerged with the passion and energy of a true calling. It was a partnership that was meant to be- in more ways than one. Telishas crystal-clear voice can float like a butterfly on a mountain breeze or thunder like a freight train, and Dougs guitar playing lays the perfect foundation for either. The past year has seen a lot of doors open for Doug and Telisha and the future looks to be even more promising for the duo. There is a strong sense of urgency and purpose. Doug and Telisha are looking forward to touring and traveling as much as possible in support of their new record.
