Smooth jazz that you can sit back and listen too in your car at home or just relaxing after a hard day 17 MP3 Songs JAZZ: Smooth Jazz, URBAN/R&B: Contemporary urban Details: I started drumming on books when I was four or five years old, putting the books on the bed and listening to the radio while playing along. And at that time I was playing to such sensations as Stevie Wonder, The Hawkins Family, Earth, Wind Fire, and the Spinners. Today, with those early influences still imbuing my work, I remember those first lessons as being instrumental in preparing me for the release of, Slow Walkin = Smooth Talkin.
Seventeen original and sociable jazz tracks were laid down at Latter Rain Production Co. in Jacksonville, NC. They gave me timing. And timing is everything when youre playing drums. However, it wouldnt be until early 2005 that my time for this solo effort would come. Although I debuted at age 11, playing for my church and assimilating the gospel music would remain a lifelong influence in my life. I'd wake up in the middle of the night and just get on my bass guitar and play what I heard. Its hard writing music, but its a gift. And its a gift I've been waiting for years to share. A friend and fellow musician, Tim Rainer, who plays saxophone, bass and add vocals on this project and coincidentally owns Latter Rain Productions, helped bring the wait to a successful end. Music is like a conversation. You give each musician time to speak.
When you have communication, it sounds good. Fleshed out as I intertwined on vocals and percussion, Rainer on sax, bass and vocals, Steve Spraggins on keyboard, Shaun Hargett (my nephew) on bass, Tony Jones on lead guitar and Gabriel Rainer on sax, Slow Walkin is a solid effort from a jazz man making initial tracks toward my Nirvana. One of my aspirations is to play at the Blue Note, the legendary jazz club on West Third Street in Manhattan. When I got back after a birthday visit there in March, I said, I can do this....
