If the suit fits, wear it. What happens when a piece of technology is left behind, only to be found by the lesser developed inhabitants? The combat suits of the space vessel Staten Island were not meant to fall into the hands of the people of this planet. This feudal society had the equivalent social and technological development of Earth's crusades. But First Lieutenant Jesus Gonzales couldn't help it, he was dying, and he couldn't find it in himself to take the captain of the ship that the Staten Island collided with down with him. So he disabled the Combat Mode on one of the flying suits and taught him a few English words to get him home. What else could he do? Well, an advanced technology in the hands of the unfamiliar has a funny way of starting all kinds of things... like a religion.
