===== ABOUT THE ARTIST THE ALBUM:

FEVERTECH. 2006. Mom says: "Think Fischerspooner meets The Prodigy!" Fevertech is the world infamous cross-humanized brand name capable of fighting impulses and freezing the soul. Slays corporate demons and liberal panty waists alike. Opinionated in the morning, rarely gives a damn after lunch. Fond of people as long as they are far away and accessible via ethernet. Produces breakbeat, trip-hop, electro, audio-trash hybrids, and bastardized pop. Influenced by everything, informed by nothing. Insular, jaded, friendly, and excited to be here. The 17-track release, "when junk has a heart," defies tidy categorization while expressing both enchantment and fear toward technology and human destiny. The CD itself arrives in a space-aware, professionally mass-produced cardboard sleeve, autographed by Fevertech (or some other suitable international celebrity). Inside that sleeve is a remarkable 5-inch rendering of an old-fashioned slab of vinyl - yes, it looks like a record, but magically, it plays in your CD player. Album features vocal appearances by Nicole Rappaport, Jonas Heath, Ryan and Gabriel Bettencourtt, and Fresh Nelly. Fever delivers 3 full-on vocal tracks as well.
