Details: Re: BACK TO THE ENDLESS Back to the Endless was born out of my own personal search. After a long and very successful career in the commercial world of music, I stopped. I traveled to the Middle East. I walked the very same streets and pathways that have been worn away by thousands of feet over thousands of years. It is as it was and all its surroundings, rich in history, are still very much alive. The Hassidim, the Arabs, walk around you as if indifferent to the passage of time, all dressed in the ancient garb of their ancestors- and the Christian clerics still guard the holy sites of the One from Nazareth. Across from new shopping malls, shepherds still tend to their flocks, and a few kilometers further down the road, the malls turn into Bedouin tents. For ten years I returned, again and again, to Israel. Here I found a Home. And, among all the many who make up this region, I found life. Haim. Around me, swirling Modern day life demanded its existence, but at its very root, the essence of spiritual energy rose from the ground, into the air, through my nose and into my soul. I believe we come from a place called the ENDLESS, and it is to this place we return. Ive always carried the notion that, at our very core, we were basically all the same. With what differences we carried here on this earth, for however long our stay, we would all return to the source -- that place where ego melted, hatred and cruelty vanished, pain and suffering disappeared, and the very stuff that we are made of, found its Home, in the vastness and mystery, called the ENDLESS. Back To The Endless is a chronicle of my journey. Hopefully it provides a place for everyone to experience his or her own personal journey, bringing the distance of the great beyond a little nearer and the distances between all of us, here on earth, a little closer. Jeff Vilinsky

In the late 90s driven by his desire to experience music outside of his native USA, Jeff traveled extensively throughout Europe and the Middle East sharing and working with musicians from many countries.
