Club, disco house, pop. 7 MP3 Songs ELECTRONIC: Dance, ELECTRONIC: Pop Crossover Details: By now, most serious music fans recognize Scandinavia as a pop hotbed. But what of the infrequently-discussed countries across the Baltic Sea from hipster Stockholm all of which have their own musical traditions? The cleverly-named N-Euro represents Estonia, a newcomer to the EU, and a small nation that has thrived and grown since winning its independence from Russia in 1991. Tallinn, the capital, is a thoroughly cosmopolitan city and N-Euro makes the kind of music thats welcomed in cities around the globe. Its high-gloss, high-energy, infectious dance-pop, suitable for clubgoing, gym-going, or just getting down in the privacy of your home. His material bears the hallmark of all great dance music: Once you hear an N-Euro song, youre never likely to forget that you did. The artist makes a striking visual impression, too. N-Euro possesses one of the wildest hairdos in pop history: A spiky, gelled-up starburst that makes his head resemble a lethal weapon. His earrings, designer shades, copious jewelry, and stylish threads all announce his presence with authority, but his most vital accessory is his impish smile. N-Euro has a great, self-deprecating sense of humor -- and character radiates from every gesture he makes. His quirky approachability has helped him become a darling of the European dance-music underground. And now, America beckons. Hes already shown he can reach international audiences: Noise, his irresistible lead single, became an under-the-radar smash in discos around the globe. But Lover On The Line is the track thats going to throw the world open for N-Euro. Its an irresistible dance-floor stomp, filled with huge beats, glittering synths, and a magnetic performance by the producer-vocalist. Its already been released throughout the EU, and its hit the European dance-download charts; this ear-worm has even infected South Africa. In late autumn, Lover On The Line hit #1 on Vivas club rotation list and ever since, thousands of Europeans have been unable to dislodge the mantra-like refrain from their heads. The video clip for Lover On The Line is like the artists music glitzy, sexy, and not altogether serious. N-Euro casts himself as the concierge of the five-star Grand Euro Hotel." This giant glass building dominates the skyline of an unnamed Continental metropolis. The Grand Euro is no stodgy relic of the old country, though. Its completely sleek and modern, sparsely decorated, and flooded with white light. In fact, the only splashes of color in the lobby are N-Euro himself and his bank of pastel telephones. With these, he can communicate with the gorgeous women in various states of undress who phone him for assistance. At one point, the helpful concierge has five naughty conversations going on at once and requires the assistance of an extra set of hands. Eventually, talking isnt enough, and N-Euro rides the glass elevator to the beautifully-appointed penthouses. Theres a choreographed sequence on the roof of the hotel, too; an opportunity for all the girls to shake it at once. N-Euro gets in on the action, too, dancing in front of the skyline, his smiling face flooded with electric light. People who are interested in should consider this download.
