Octavia "Jymini" Harris / Songwriter / Rapper / Producer Biography Jymini, aka "151", aka "Octavia The Mic Strangla", began writing, rapping and performing in the 3rd grade. Heavily influenced by her older brothers who were breakers, DJ's, rappers and producers, she fell in love with Hip-Hop from the beginning. In 1994 she released a classic tape titled "Drank No Chasa," and thus became Portland Oregon's first taste of a female MC. A couple years later she released an inspirational Double-CD titled: "Walking On Water" and performed at several youth oriented functions all around the NW. A few major highlights of her career before moving to Oakland, CA in 2000 were filling in for Queen Latifah at Z100's Last Chance Summer Dance, opening up for Spearhead, Yukmouth Brother Lynch, to name a few. Jymini wanted to be closer to the independent rap scene so she packed her bags and headed to Oakland, California. In her 3 year stay she released a compilation titled: "State 2 State" which featured 18 hip-hop, R&B and Reggae artists from all over the globe (Canada, Sweden, NY and Miami to name a few) and released it locally and Internet-wide. This release in 2001 was to assist other artists with exposure to the west coast and encourage cross promoting between indie artists and labels. She also dropped a solo album in late 2002 titled: "The Solo Child" which features some big names from the Bay Area, such as Agerman (of 3x's Krazy), E-40's sister Suga T and Assassin. Jymini produced 75 of that album and it still continues to sell briskly at shows and on the Internet. Jymini's sound as a producer was beginning to develop at that stage and everyone from every walk of life began to really feel what she was doing with her music at the time. What was next for Jymini? That she relocate to the LA/Long Beach area to pursue her dreams full throttle
