The results of this process are maps of/to lost and uncharted realms. In a culture of encroaching technology, increasing hyper-rationality, and stifling binary thought, I feel it is not only a radical approach, but of increasing importance to address feeling and intuitionthe widely unacknowledged subtleties of our being. In addition, since training in Reiki and other forms of energy healing, incorporating the healing properties of music has become of increasing interest to me." - Steve Brand Sound sources include: medicine drums, udu, rattles, flutes, found, natural and handmade objects, voice, field recordings and keyboards. Emotional aspects of a recordings always come first. Brand's recordings have been described as ambient, tribal, ritualistic, a direct link to our ancient, and arcane ancestry and ...not mere music, but an almost shamanic attempt at deconstructing our interpretation of reality, by connecting us to an anti-technological, primal psyche. Since 1995, Brand has released more than 20 disks as Augur, and more recently under his own name, on various independent labels in USA, Canada and Italy. Brand has also collaborated with a number of artists and his music have been distributed worldwide.
