Asked to write a nature song by the shows director, Annie wrote Listen, and the song and the show were subsequently filmed and shown on CBS. I remember being this excited 14 year old kid, so psyched that the first song I had ever written was on TV, Annie reflects now. If someone had told me that 30 years later, Id be recording that song with my own child, I would have laughed! Now I have whole communities of school-aged children singing my own choruses back at me, and it really is a great feeling. This same great feeling carries over into many of Annies songs. Her recent childrens single, Thats All There Is, was recently featured and favorably reviewed on the Peabody Award-winning childrens radio program Kids Corner with Kathy OConnell on Philadelphias WXPB, with rebroadcasts on Sirius Radio. The song remains in rotation. Thats All There Is is also in the BroadjamTop 10 Unique Childrens Genre (as of this writing), and has enjoyed this honor for the past 11 weeks. Several of Annies songs from her previously released, self-titled CD, are also in the BroadjamTop 10 Bluegrass Genre. Songs Leavin Me Signs and See You Soon have also received airplay in the country music market, in addition to being used in several television commercials, cable TV shows, and one fine rodeo in Texas! Annie also lent her song The Key To My Heart, as music for an educational video to promote reverse-mainstreaming in Pennsylvania schools. The song instantly became the lynchpin for the entire effort, and generated a surprisingly large number of requests for copies from teary-eyed parents. In response to the recent requests she has received for copies of her various songs, Annie Lynn is now surrounded in the studio once again, with talented musicians, joyful singing children, a great producer, and of course cookies. Her upcoming second CD, SONGS ABOUT COOKIES AND LIFE, reflects the often-comedic happenings of family life. Annie makes sure to represent both sides of the coin while giving equal voice to the parents and kids views. This family-oriented CD also gives spotlight to the thoughts and feelings of children as related to her by the many children she has taught. Musically, the CD is infused with catchy choruses, memorable lyrics, and sweet harmonies from both Annie and her featured children-performers. Bringing an upbeat, make-you-want-to-move, country/bluegrass feel to many of the songs are the magic-picking fingers of banjo-great Wanamaker Lewis. Let that smile on your face remain as you feel your toes begin to tap in time with the groovin fiddle/mandolin playing of Steve Toll, from folk touring company Prescription Music. The icing on the cake is the well-mixed sound that producer Chris Arms, also a successful songwriter with several radio hits to his credit, brings to this project. Annie Lynn is a classically trained musician, and holds a B.S.ed from West Chester University in PA. Annie also studied music education at the Hartt College of Music at the University of Hartford in CT, as well as WCU. Before becoming a professional songwriter, Annie taught music and first through fifth grade in several Pennsylvania elementary school systems. As a singer/songwriter, she performed in area clubs throughout Delaware, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York. In a continuing roll, Annie works with Prescription Music, a music education touring company dedicated to preserving traditional folk music by performing in area schools and camps. Annie is also the mother of 10 year old Alexander, a budding singer/songwriter, and frequent co-collaborator and touring partner. Annie Lynn would like to publicly admit that she has a wicked cookie habit, hence the title of her delicious-for-the-ears CD, SONGS ABOUT COOKIES AND LIFE." See You Soon
