Soulful, playful and haunting contemporary jazz that takes you places you haven't been before with jazz standards! Barbara Steel sings in the true spirit of jazz -- taking a song and "swinging" it with updated rhythms and improvising on the phrasing and lyrics. The sequence on This Satin Doll is a soulful, bittersweet, playful and haunting meditation on love in all its grit and glory. Barbara is thrilled to be accompanied by such accomplished musicians who made her sound come alive: Marc Puricelli, Patience Higgins, Jon Weiss, Victor Jones, Greg Skaff, Mark Peterson, Herschel Dwellingham, Lou Soloff, Lonny Plaxico and many other great musicians. Here's a little something about each song: Satin Doll (Acid jazz with an urban feel. The original lyrics of this song ooze sexual innuendo and this new version takes that lead a step farther. Listen for the bi-femme fatale, always a true Satin Doll!) (I'd be Surprisingly) Good For You (Latin jazz. In the true spirit of jazz, taking a Broadway show tune (from Evita) and "swinging" it.) Baby, It's Cold Outside (Traditional jazz with role reversals and a new setting for the conversation (a bar). Let's face it roles have changed and this interpretation brings it up to date.) I Should've Known Better (A Love Song. Surprising rendition of a Beatles classic. Sweet and haunting look at one's self in a new love affair.) Comes Love (Hot, bluesy, smooth jazz rendition of this classic. A bit cynical throughout and kinda gritty toward the end. All about what a woman can do to you and how nothing can be done...) Love For Sale (Traditional jazz with new groove. Great piano and flute solos.) What a Little Moonlight Can Do (Sweet and sexy version with a nice groove, traditional jazz.)
