Multi-genre recombinant fun 12 MP3 Songs POP: Quirky, ROCK: Ska Details: Jan 1, 2005 update -- this CD is holding up a lot better than I expected, thanks mainly to the amazing musicians and the great vibe we had in the studio. Serious fun. The first song is a skagheti Western about a killer cat -- or is it a damaged lover? -- with terrific solos by trombonist Josh Roseman and clarinetist Scotty Wotty Shetler while the second takes a slightly le jazz hot, Heidi Heidi Heidi Ho tone in offering all you Betty Boops out there advice -- "Get Lucky" -- and a soundtrack for your lives. The third song draws an impenetrable parallel between child molesting and imperialism -- what if James Bond were actually an American? -- and the fourth is a simple Boodhistic meditation on life and loss and cosmic consolations. So there. There's a stomping roadhouse sax solo by Peter Apfelbaum on the fifth song, memories of underdevelopment in the sixth, and much more. The title tune is a true account of my experiences as a long-time journalist in everybody's favorite city, as told by a shaggy dog. Enjoy.
