The group explores a hauntingly eclectic mix of Reddy originals inspired by hymns, processional, threnodies, ballads, sambas and more. From the liner notes by journalist/author Howard Mandel: "One might be reminded of Ornette Coleman's loose unisons, Henry Threadgill's circusy spins, Frank Zappa's angularities (during "Procession," for instance), headstrong early jazz or the Master Musicians of Joujouka meeting Weather Report (on "Hundred Devils" itself, where Reddy takes up the soprano sax, perhaps in honor but not imitation of Wayne Shorter). Such references only go so far, each of Reddy's pieces, whether expansive at 11 minutes or brief at one, being distinctly original...you will recognize this as serious (but never didactic) work, freshly conceived and brilliantly realized by fully engaged collaborators, because it sounds so good, unusual and true." Rob Reddy's Gift Horse features Mark Taylor (French horn), Charles Burnham (violin), Brandon Ross (acoustic and electric guitars), Dom Richards (double bass) and Mino Cinelu (percussion).
