Their 2006 debut album, 'Going Strong,' establishes them with an undeniably great dance record. With sensibillites for disco cuts and late 70's/ early 80's remixes, this Portland trio has thoughtfully packaged every track. Keyboardist, John Zeigler, and beat-maker/guitarist, Patrick Morris, create a backdrop for Bailey Winters' Jaggeresque vocals. Disco elements, such as oscillating basslines and keyboard swells, fuse with Gary Glitter cheers in "Let's Cruise (In A Non-Cruisin' Zone)." Strength has the ability to turn even the smallest space into a dance floor. Their swaggering, effervescent stage performances remind audiences why they seek live music in the first place.
