Harnessing sequencing and video technology, Wirebox has created a unique style that transcends traditional boundaries that confine most rock and roll bands today. Lead singer Anabel Correa's transitive, melodic vocal style aloft a dynamic array of keyboard sequencing and fused together with live drums and bass puts Wirebox into a whole new arena of live and recorded sound. Band founder and bass player Rob Trujillo and drummer Russ Simms provide a powerful backbone to the trio's live performances while calling on their combined songwriting and sequencing abilities to create Wirebox's music. With songs riddled with messages of relationship angst, comparisons of humans and machines, and challenging traditional thoughts about sex and religion, the band aims to connect with a forward thinking audience who question these issues alike. WIREBOX is, without a doubt, an innovative band with innovative ideas and a burning motivation to write songs and give performances that captivate and fully engage their audience.
