Dear Aspiring Internet Marketer, As you are reading this letter, product brands are now competing for shelf space with their retailers such as Wal-Mart, Tesco, Giant, and Carrefour. So what has this got to do with you? In two words: A LOT. Before we jump into the Internet Marketing context, let me explain. Did you notice that retailers and chain stores are now slowly producing products of their own in the offline world? Perhaps you did. Or maybe you were not aware. Its okay even if you didnt realize this change, as I am about to reveal it to you. And when this happens, it wont come as any surprise that many a product brand are now competing for shelf space even with their retailers. Now Here is the kicker: the retailers obtain the Private Label to some physical goods, simply brand them as their own or label under their store logo, and push them into the marketplace - thus offering another option to the consumers! And regardless of whichever brand or product the consumer chooses, the retailers win. If the consumers lean more towards the store brands (which were formerly private labeled), it would spell tough competition for retailers. Brilliant idea, you think? Hey...
