Raw "vibey" acoustic vignettes from the California desert to the crumbled shipyards of Brooklyn. File under Urban Americana. 5 MP3 Songs FOLK: Urban Folk, COUNTRY: Americana Details: Stray dog on the bank of the river Streetcar with weeds in its wheels The sugar factory stands abandoned Amanda knows just how that feels from Hope Anchor Don Everett Pearce builds his music on the foundations of blues, country, folk, but he does so with a contemporary urban sensibility and with a natural, weathered voice that is distinctly his own. This no-frills set of home-recorded songs makes for the kind of intimate listening experience that only a solo acoustic-based recording can deliver. The instrumentation is sparse and uncluttered, yet thick with vibe. Pearces songwriting places a strong emphasis on character setting. Whether the song is set in the California desert (Looking for Water in Joshua Tree) or in the crumbled shipyards of Brooklyn, NY (Hope Anchor), the descriptiveness in the lyrics brings it all to life in a way that is almost cinematic. This EP is not so much the follow-up to Pearces debut album Brutish Little Ballet (2002) as it is the quiet prelude to a new album, working title: Last Dive in Town, which is coming right along and will likely see the light of day before the end of 2007. File under Urban Americana.
