----- FULL BAND BIOGRAPHY Obedientbone are a 3-piece band/production team based in the South-West who write/produce perform a unique hybrid of beats n breaks/Hip-Hop/Rock dark-pop. They started life 5 years ago as a studio-based project, the band were becoming increasingly tired of the formulaic approach that the drum n bass scene seemed to be taking at the time and decided to experiment with more organic ideas and live instrumentation. The first success for this new direction was the release of their 12 single Tendril which featured MC DARRISON, which was picked up by MG ROVER for use on an advertisement. This early success helped finance the bands studio and enabled the guys to start spending much more time on writing and looking for a full time vocalist. In 2002 the band were introduced by a mutual friend to singer/songwriter Demelza and from that point Obedientbones sound started to become what it is today. After months of lockdown in the studio experimenting with technology and how to fuse it with the band members multi-instrumental capabilities they emerged with their debut, self-produced self- titled album. The album received critical acclaim and its songs helped the band win the Diesel-U-Music Award 2004 which included a live performance as well as the award ceremony itself @ Fabric, London which has been televised numerous times on Channel 4 MTV. Presenting the award was Radio 1 DJ Edith Bowman who introduced Obedientbone as The best band youve never heard of!. The national press, most notably The Independent newspaper, picked up on the buzz surrounding the band ran full length feature interviews with the headline The Future of British Urban Music. News of the award spread far and wide and tracks from the album started to find their way onto British International radio playlists. Obedientbone have built a reputation as one of the freshest, and most exciting live bands around with a truly compelling, unique sound.
