"Elastic synth-pop ditties Alphabet Army delivers its imaginative, hyperactive fusion with little irony. These kids want you to dance and sing along, not slouch and scowl." Details: Five years in the making and eagerly anticipated by fans of their ultra-bouncy live shows, Alphabet Army's "People Are Alone And Happy" marks a slick, sparkling debut from the Philadelphia-New York duo. Alphabet Army craft fleshed-out electronic pop that's every bit as influenced by current dance music as the New Wave gems of the '80s. Day-Glo synths and sharp guitars jump out over rubbery beats as the boys sing charming, harmony-laden odes to monsters, baby birds, and a girl nicknamed "Indie Anna." Performed and produced entirely by Alphabet Army, "People Are Alone And Happy" is a sweet treat that's as sonically layered as it is simply fun, and as referential as it is original.
