//Heartbreak Stroke is a retro rockabilly tune sure to get your feet tapping. //When I Fall is a straight up rocker in the style of The Who meets the Foo Fighters //Armor to the Wind is a beautiful pop piano ballad //Stand Alone is an emotional song about letting go of someone //Rain is an amazing song about finding the good when everything is going wrong. //Separation Anxiety, a fan fave, is the perfect pop song. Fun and makes you want to tap your feet and sing along. Who is this Chad Macomber? Chad Macomber, born in Salem, MA in April of 1981, loves music. In fact he loves music so much he made some of his own. He attended college at the Ringling School of Art and Design where he met bandmate Dylan Duncan. There they formed the mighty Eleven Project, the greatest band you've never heard. Dylan is a tool and he got busy on other things (such as the wonderful film, Ghosts of Vermont), so Chad ventured off on his own. This is the product of that very attempt. Incorporating such musical influences as U2, Collective Soul, Oasis, Coldplay, and Radiohead "On Phoenix Wings in Flight" is a beautiful amalgam of those artists and Chad's own talents. Other talents he insists he has are: graphic design, drawing, centerfield, and reading Spiderman comic books. You'll often find him in a bar trying to explain to you the philosophy behind The Matrix Trilogy swearing up and down that it's the greatest trilogy ever created (unless they make a third Bad Boys). He hates beer but loves Jack Daniels, and likes to annoy people by reciting Bad Boys quotes. Infatuated with dating shows Chad often spends time with Dylan screaming at the television. He also enjoys driving around in his car belting out U2 tunes with his windows open. A shameful sight indeed. He has a cat named Rudie who purrs a lot. The cat also like Kaluha...you really should meet him.
