Her unique country/western vocal style has many saying she is the best voice to come out of Colorado in 30 years. Influenced by artists ranging from Dwight Yoakam, Patsy Cline and Merle Haggard, to Martina McBride and the Dixie Chicks, Taylor has developed a sound that is uniquely her own. Taylor is more than just another singer doing cover songs, it's all original music, her music marches to a beat of its own. Taylor has long been considered an incredible vocal talent and a consummate entertainer. Among her impressive credits; she has been invited to sing the National Anthem at several Major League ball parks including Wrigley Field in Chicago where she entertained nearly 40,000 fans before the Cubs beat the Cincinnati Reds. Taylor credits her experience living and working in Nashville with helping her to develop as an artist. Now living in Colorado Taylor has focused more of her time songwriting. Her new CD, "It's About Time" scheduled for release in August of 2004 will include four songs she has written including the title track. The much anticipated album also includes songs written by some of Nashville's heaviest hitters including Skip Ewing, Bob Dipiero, Pam Tillis Templeton Thompson. Previously a member of Mudflap's KYGO Band, Taylor is now performing as the lead singer of the Brenda Taylor Band. She regularly entertains at many of the top country venues in the region. Simply put, an evening well spent. She is a most talented entertainer who engages her audience with her uncanny ability to deliver her music her way.
