Some would consider what I do too revealing of things private. I feel that it helps us to connect and realize that we all have been hurt and damaged in our relationships. It is this recognition that leads way to dialogue and eventually healing. All I can do as a song writer is bare my soul, hope that some one else feels the same way and want to move towards healthier and happier relationships. I know in my life that writing songs that are revealing have led to the healing of my own relationships. It takes being vulnerable, and vulnerability takes trust, and trust is the cornerstone of a healthy relationship. I hope these songs help you and your loved ones become closer and ultimately more loving. God knows the world needs more of that!!!!
