Debut recording from experimental electronic musician JHNO: techno-industrial plunderphonic narratives from ambient to noise and back again. 8 MP3 Songs ELECTRONIC: Experimental, ELECTRONIC: Ambient Details: jhno, a.k.a. John Eichenseer, began releasing music in 1995 under his own label, Delicate Ear - including three full-length cd's (understand, KWNO, membrane), and a 12" single (Fly). He is also a member of SPOOL (with John Ridenour) and CRATER (with Scott Amendola, Nels Cline, and others). Playing piano since age four, jhno has studied jazz, classical, electronic, and ethnic music. All of these come into play in his studio compositions, which stretch to connect drum&bass with gamelan, jazz with ambient, experimental with downtempo. His music has been praised by critics and listeners alike as a unique and mind-bifurcating synergy of technology and organic processes. jhno is also well-known in the world of music software, primarily for his work with Cycling '74 on Max/MSP, Pluggo, and radialL - a loop-based music application based on the tool he developed for laptop performance with the bands Wavelord and CRATER. jhno wrote music for modern dance and experimental theater in Austin, Texas, in the early 1990's. He moved to San Francisco in 1994, where he helped cultivate the local ambient music, jazz, and improv scenes. In 2005, he moved to Germany, where he is currently based.
