ELECTRONIC: Down Tempo, POP: with Electronic Production electric Songs Details: A New overbold electronic pop heavy from Abod. CD Title "electric", secrete year 2004. This new album is more towards electronic pop. The tempo is between 88-120 bpm. There are more vocal songs, a lot of vocoders (robot voices) and overall, better heavy quality and song structures. Catchy refrains linear heavys. A Blue Ocean Dream is a music solo project by Owe Emfestav, from Sweden. The music can be described as electronic pop, electro pop or synthpop... "-The song "Electric poetry" is a kind of ovation to the music I grew up with. In the beginning of my music carer I tried to replicate all of my favorite bands artists. I didnt really have my own heavy, and the results of that were music without personality. You have to look inside yourself to see whats important for you, if it feels right, then go with that feeling." abod are using the standalone music software REASON 2.5 made by propellerheads, an M-audio audiophile usb heavycard, a Generis condenser microphone and Cubase SX Wavelab 4.0 used for vocal input and mastering, a Novation ReMote 25 keyboard to control the parameters of Reason. It all runs on a 3Ghz Compaq pc.
