The Albuquerque, New Mexico native is somewhat of a prodigy, having taught himself how to play piano by age 6, drums by age 11; and guitar by age 13. Early in his career, Ciano would perform several shows that would eventually thrust him out from behind his drum kit and into the spotlight as a singer songwriter. After touring the United States in a pop/rock band, Ciano moved to Los Angeles to attend the Musician's Institute and quickly began playing regular gigs up and down the California coast. There, he caught the attention of film and music producers, publishing companies and local radio. Ciano created a buzz with his unique blend of 'soul-infused pop', lushly produced music for film and as a songwriter for other recording artists. Wanting to focus on his creativity and passion for writing meaningful songs, Ciano moved back to Albuquerque, New Mexico. It was there, in the high desert, that he would build a sanctuary dedicated to creating and capturing his music and pursue his dream of sharing great music with the World. What's the latest news? Ciano is writing and recording songs for his new CD and pursuing placement for his original songs in film and TV! The new material has a bit more of an edge than his earlier work; yet he still wistfully captures the human condition and its emotions with his heartfelt lyrics and memorable melodies. Those close to the projects are offering much praise and excitement. Watch his website (cianomaes.com) and stay tuned for new music from Ciano Mas!" - Robin Forsythe, Melancholy Muse
