Glitchy ambient-techno 10 MP3 Songs ELECTRONIC: Ambient, ELECTRONIC: Techno Details: This is Danny Kreutzfeldt recording under the name sgnl_fltr. As explained on the CD, Sgnl_fltr is the rhythmic alter ego of Danny Kreutzfeldt, whose excellent Counterperipheral CD was reviewed on these pages in November. Sure enough, Nomo jumps right in to a stuttering rhythm and heavy punchy bass. Very modern and edgy stuff, yet altogether accessible. Pranka slows things down but remains firmly rooted in synthetic electronics, with soft shuffling percussion and more bass. Empak is a brief abstract piece with little clicks and wind-like synths whooshing by. Glacion has an appropriately chilly feel, a la Biosphere with sparse drones and effects. Run-Ra stomps steadily along with a nice bit of crunchiness, for lack of a better word. Lono moves semi-spastically along, with quirky pulses carrying a wide variety of sound samples along for the enjoyable ride. It is equal parts Spyra, Pete Namlook, and similar sources of intelligent electronica. Each track is an experiment, a blank canvas to which a sonic abstract painting is applied. Nkuh saves the best for last, moving at a moderate clip in a cool groove, abruptly bringing Vebra to its conclusion.
