When he came up with a couple of theories, his tutor was shocked. "Carl, this idea of yours is a little beyond my pay grade," his professor told him. "In this department we are experts on mapping. We use photography, infrared imaging, surveying, even laser imaging. What you are proposing is so far beyond my expertise, I'm not sure anyone here can give you any advice as to whether it would work or not." How can a simple graduate program lead to espionage and murder? The story of Carl Harris questioned the credibility of the University, the FBI and the NSF. What appears to be a simple research project story, finds complex turns that almost lead to a conflict between nations.
