Delicate, diverse, and catchy rock/pop with substance. 5 MP3 Songs POP: 60's Pop, ROCK: Folk Rock

Details: This is the debut EP from Joe H and the Domains. Joe H. is a 23 year old singer/songwriter who also is a producer, performer, multi-instrumentalist and arranger. He is a avid fan of 50's and 60's pop culture, with a slew of influences from artists of the era. Not only is he stuck on the 50's and 60's, but he enjoys other music from all eras ranging from all sorts of genres, even non-rock styles. Mid Day Rising is the first EP released by this solo artist (and his band), which are a batch of some memorable acoustic-oriented pop songs, which range back from his most favorite artists from the 50's, 60's and 70's with a nod to modern rock artists. The first 3 songs are upbeat folk-rock/pop type songs that has melodies that you'll be singing along to in no time. They all have elements of clever studio crafting with arrangements, the stereo spectrum and in the recording process in general. "Reason For Waiting" is a piano ballad with some fine emotional lead vocals. "Winter" is a jazzy torch ballad pop song. The last song on the EP called "The Northern Lights" is an ethereal piano/strings instrumental which shows a composers view of songwriting and arranging orchestral instruments.
