However his songwriting abilities were not realized until his college years while earning his degree in Music Therapy. During an internship at a state psychiatric hospital with schizophrenic patients, Andy began using songwriting to cope with the harsh realities he faced on a daily basis. To hone his writing skills, he then moved to Nashville for three years where he performed, recorded and wrote with musicians including Gary Burnett, Daniel Tashien and Jill Sobule. In 2001, Andy moved to Los Angeles where he has been packing local clubs with full band and solo performances.
