CLASSICAL: Traditional, EASY LISTENING: Mood Music Details: COMFORT JOY conjures the hope, spirit and magic of the winter season with holiday favorites such as "Holly and the Ivy," "What Child is This?" as well as music by Bizet, Berlioz, Corelli and others that evokes feelings of the winter months.

Detroit musicians Kerstin Allvin and Jeff Zook arranged many of the selections and these innovative tracks are brought to life with the help of their friends in the Michigan classical and jazz music community.

From the press: Zook's resonant flute tone and suave phrasing melt lovingly inside Allvin's clearly articulated harp. David Taylor's percussion adds color and oomph, and several of Zook's colleagues from the Detroit Symphony join in on Arcangelo Corelli's gentle Christmas Concerto. The overall mood is relaxed and peaceful, and it's to the duo's credit that the music reduces holiday stress without inducing a somnolent stupor. Mark Strkyer - Free Press For the spirit of the season couched in first-class musicianship, look no further than this animated, yet elegant, program of duets. Allvin, harpist with the Flint Symphony, and Zook, who plays in the Detroit Symphony, offer 19 carols and classical selections in tasteful arrangements warmly recorded. Lawrence Johnson - Detroit News Kerstin Allvin has won numerous awards and competitions and has performed at Carnegie Recital Hall and at the historic Carmel Mission in California. She toured Japan as a soloist, giving concerts at the prestigious Suntory Hall in Tokyo and was invited to play the inaugural concerts at Nogi City's new concert hall, and for Toyota City's Sister City Association.
